

PULI TRADING

INTRODUCER HANDBOOK

A complete guide to being an introducer for Puli Trading LLP.

WELCOME

Welcome to Puli Trading, an Alternative Investment Fund based in the UK. Please read this handbook explaining your role, responsibilities, and rules of engagement.

Under FCA regulations, we are not allowed to market our services. Therefore, this guide is in place to ensure our introducers fully understand what this is, how the fund functions, and, most importantly, how they are allowed to act (and the implications of acting incorrectly).

As a fund that is not allowed to market its services, the growth and awareness is based entirely on word of mouth, client retention, and the ability to produce sustainable profits for investors. Ultimately, this means we can control the speed at which we grow and maintain focus on the exclusivity and sustainability of the fund.

With all of this in mind, introducers allow us to keep all the integral components important, whilst assisting in organic growth through ethical and sustainable means.

The most important aspect of introducing is understanding how regulatory requirements govern our ability to engage with individuals to provide information on our Fund and accept investment.

As an Alternative Investment Fund, we are strictly prohibited from the marketing of, and intake to, the Fund from retail investors. Therefore, we must check the eligibility of every individual before any marketing information is provided to them. To achieve this, every potential investor must complete a self-certification form before they can view our website, be sent any information regarding the Fund, including but not limited to rates of return, marketing material, or anything that may be regarded as an enticement as defined by the FCA handbook.
